Weekly Snapshot

DJIA ↓ 0.1%	S&P 500 ↓ 0.3%	RUS 2000 ↓ 0.4%	NASDAQ ↓ 0.8%

This was a slower week for stocks due to the holidays drying up volume. The poor index performance was likely due to tax-loss selling, which is typical within the last week of the year. The noteworthy bullish moves came from commodities, with gold, natural gas, and crude oil all closing green. Natural gas gained 10% and bounced back from its lowest levels since March.

Bowser stocks (up 3.3% on average) significantly outperformed major indices due to the unusual strength from Koss (KOSS). We sent out a daily mover alert regarding the stock's price action, which was likely a result of short-term short sellers crowding the stock. This was a much quieter week than usual as companies don't release news in the last week of the year. We're expecting the upcoming week to pick back up even though it is a short one!

Bowser Notes

Happy New Year Bowser Buckaroos! 2017 was an outstanding year for long-term investors as the stock market, along with our recommendations, delivered great returns. Major indices closed green almost every single month within the past year and Bowser stocks followed. Although this past week was quiet due to tax-loss selling, it was still a great year for microcap stock investors.
