Bowser Companies: 0.2%

Major indices started off the week with fireworks but ended up giving back the majority of their gains. Technology stocks helped push the Nasdaq higher and a few big names within the sector will be reporting earnings next week. Inflation data will be coming out next week and the U.S. Presidential Election is three weeks away.

Bowser stocks (down 0.2% for the week) pulled back slightly with very few headlines. Volume was lower across the board and the Russell 2000 Index underperformed as well. MamaMancini's (MMMB) closed flat despite two positive headlines highlighting its product placements and potential sales. ENGlobal Corp. (ENG) was the biggest loser as it gave back more gains from its recent run up.

Company Headlines

- Monday: No significant news.
- Tuesday: Trxade Group (MEDS) announced that its Bonum Health subsidiary has partnered with SingleCare, the prescription savings service, to enhance Bonum's enterprise telehealth solutions with prescription discounts.
- Wednesday: cbdMD (YCBD) reported preliminary 4QFY20 financial results. The company expects net sales to increase between 76-77% from $23.7 million in the same period last year. MamaMancini's (MMMB) secured milestone new product placements with tier-1 national retailer accounts for its Plant-Based Meatballs made with Beyond Meat®, Pasta Bowls, and Beef Meatballs and Sauce. Sono-Tek Corp. (SOTK) reported 2QFY21 financial results. Net income increased 50% to $178,000.
- Thursday: TOMI Environmental Solutions (TOMZ) successfully deployed SteraBot™ at the Lithuanian University Hospital of Health Sciences.
- Friday: MamaMancini's (MMMB) engaged B&A Food Brokers (B&A), one of the largest independent food brokers, for food service sales solicitation in the Mid-Atlantic region of the United States.

Bowser Notes

MamaMacini's (MMMB) stole the spotlight with two headlines this week. The company announced new product placements for its Plant-Based Meatballs and that it has engaged a food broker for potential sales. While these headlines do not add a ton of value, management has been very proactive and is clearly working towards boosting growth.

Shares of our latest recommendation, cbdMD (YCBD), dropped this week following last week's run up. The company reported preliminary 4QFY20 financial results, expecting net sales to increase between 76-77%. Keep in mind that the recent run up was due to political headlines surrounding the potential federal decriminalization of marijuana in the United States.
