Bowser Companies: 0.7%

Stocks erased their recent gains following a combination of negative headlines. The tension between Russia and Ukraine caused equities to decline at the end of the week. In addition to the international headlines, comments regarding more aggressive rate hikes from St. Louis Federal Reserve President James Bullard spiked volatility.

Bowser stocks (up 0.7% for the week) had another strong week in comparison to major indices as a whole. Table Trac (TBTC) was the top gainer following multiple positive headlines, including a new license grant from the Wisconsin Division of Gaming. Mace Security Int'l (MACE) shares continued to decline following the announcement of its new CEO.

Bowser Notes

Table Trac (TBTC) shares hit a 3-month high following multiple positive headlines. The company announced that the Wisconsin Division of Gaming granted it a license to install its gaming management systems in the state. Wisconsin is the seventh state gaming license granted to Table Trac, joining Colorado, Iowa, Maryland, Nevada, South Dakota and West Virginia. Its new licenses are already paying off, as the company recently signed an agreement to install the CasinoTrac management system at the Greenbrier, America's resort in West Virginia

Both Mace Security Int'l (MACE) and Williams Industrial Svcs (WLMS) were once again among the worst performers. MACE announced Sanjay Singh as its new CEO. The stock dipped as low as $0.15 per share on the headline, which marked a new 52-week low. WLMS announced that it expects to lose more multi-year contracts, resulting in a drop to its lowest levels in two years.
