Bowser Notes

While it may have been a quiet week for Bowser stocks, there were still multiple positive headlines. MariMed (MRMD) announced production expansion in Maryland, while moving up with pot stocks as a whole. Meanwhile, ENGlobal signed a marketing agreement to market the company's gas to liquids technology in the Middle East.

Earnings season had an unusual start with many large cap stocks rallying regardless of weak quarterly reports. However, investors could not overlook the poor earnings guidance from Snap (SNAP), which sank the markets on Friday. Economic headwinds are crushing margins for many growth stocks, putting them further in the red. Keep an eye on earnings guidance for your holdings in coming months for any added risks, especially companies with higher debt/equity ratios.

Major indices rallied on low volume despite mixed earnings results and lackluster macroeconomic data. Growth stocks led the run up and recorded their strongest weekly gain in four months. With earnings and multiple significant data releases on deck, the next two weeks will set the stage for the remainder of the summer.

Bowser stocks (up 1.8% for the week) recorded their third consecutive weekly gain. WaveDancer (WAVD) bounced 23% without any new headlines, however, the stock is only up 31% from its 52-week low. Low-priced names Parks! America (PRKA) and MariMed (MRMD) were also among the top performers with higher overall volume.
