Bowser Companies: 2.8%

Stocks completely erased the prior week's rally and hit new lows for September. The CPI data on Tuesday indicated that inflation has not slowed down despite lower gas prices. This caused major indices to slide ahead of the Federal Reserve announcement next week. The markets are currently indicating a 75 bps hike for the federal funds rate, with a 54% chance of a 100 bps rate hike.

Bowser stocks (down 2.8% for the week) took a beating with stocks as a whole. While our recommendations had their best year in decades last year, 2022 has been a bloodbath. Despite the strength from Innovative Food (IVFH), there were not many positive highlights this week. Headlines were infrequent and volatility persisted across the board.

Company Headlines

- Monday: No significant headlines.
- Tuesday: MariMed (MRMD) announced an agreement with 42 Degrees to manufacture and distribute MRMD's award-winning brands and products in Michigan.
- Wednesday: MamaMancini's (MMMB) reported revenue of $22.9 million, up 89% from $12.1 million in the same year-ago quarter.
- Thursday: Charles & Colvard (CTHR) expanded its Signature Collection to include lab grown diamond men's bands.
- Friday: No significant headlines.

Bowser Notes

The rate hike next week has attracted a lot of uncertainty following the recent inflation data. The CPI data was higher than expected, and Powell will be speaking twice next week. Unless the Federal Reserve revises its stance, we are likely to see another substantial rate hike. These rate hikes can increase market volatility short-term, which requires investors to maintain discipline and not overpay for new positions.

When volume dries up and volatility increases, we urge subscribers to be more conservative and picky. These market conditions punish impatient investors and reward those that are more selective. To avoid overpaying, simply pick a price that is appealing to you and wait for it. This will help you avoid taking immediate losses upon entry and allow for longer holding periods.
