Bowser Companies: 1.3%

Stocks gained slightly on still relatively low volume. Macroeconomic data throughout the week supported bulls, and Fed Chairman Powell said that it is time to start slowing interest rate hikes. The central bank will meet in two weeks. This fueled the rise in stock prices led by the Nasdaq and Russell 2000, which have remained relatively weak through the selling periods.

Bowser stocks (up 1.3% for the week) closed higher in line with the Russell 2000. It was a light week for press releases although several recommendations gained in the double digits. WaveDancer (WAVD) was the week's top gainer without any news. The stock sold off 36% last week and caught some relief this week, bouncing back 31%.

Bowser Notes

We saw some more relief from the markets this week, marking back-to-back weeks of gains. Bowser stocks were mixed but closed higher. This underscores the importance of diversification.

December is often a time of reflection for investors as we look to close out the current year and look forward to the new year. This year has been challenging for long term investors, but as long as you remained disciplined, you're well-positioned in the long-term.
